Preface

This genealogical index to the first thirty volumes of THE GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE OF NEW JERSEY was started for my personal use; but, having found that I referred to it very frequently when answering inquiries, I am making it available to others in spite of certain flaws. It will be noted that this is more than an index of given names: the type of information concerning the individual on each page is indicated, within the limits set forth below.

Although fully aware of Dutch naming customs, I have indicated a wife's name in the usual genealogical manner: husband's surname or patronymic, comma, wife's given name, parenthesis, wife's family name or patronymic, end parenthesis. Also, as most patronymics had become frozen into surnames by the time New Jersey records were started, children baptized have been given the apparent surname of their father. Thus Anna, daughter of Jan Pietersen and Abigail Purple, is listed as Anna Pietersen, though she may well have been called Annatje Jans all her life. The alternative of compiling a patronymic index also would have been pedantic.

When only two spellings of a given name occur, both are listed; if three or more are given, the most usual is listed, followed by etc. On the pages following this foreword appear most of the variants of given names occurring in the first four hundred pages. Variants of the same given name are not always placed together. Thus, one person may always have been known as Grietje and another in the same family—probably in another generation—as Margaret. In particular, distinction is normally made between Johannes and John, but not between Jan and John, partly because occasionally there will be brothers Johannes and John, just as there are brothers Nathan and Nathaniel in some families, whereas in others one is considered an abbreviation of the other.

There are literally thousands of cross-references, but two surnames are actually placed together only if there is evidence in these thirty volumes that the names are or were at least at times interchangeable. They are not placed together if such evidence is lacking, even though the compiler may know from other research that they are the same name. Thus doth the indexer vanquish the genealogist within me.

The abbreviations and symbols used are:

* = name occurs more than once on this page in this sense # = extended account, including more than vital statistics
b = birth date or (presumable) infant baptismal date
B = adult baptismal date
c = contributor
d = death date
g = grandparent
m = marriage (For males, and for females listed under their married names, it implies date of marriage. For females listed under their maiden names, it implies name of spouse. See also s. (Also used for Quaker intentions and reports of marriage out of meeting.)
p = parent s = spouse. (Husband or wife indicated. Not used when parents are mentioned in connection with a baptism of their own children.)
t = tombstone inscription: anything from the mere name to a biographical sketch; usually includes dates and family relationships. (If a parent occurs in a family group in a connected series of inscriptions, only t is used, If, however, his or her name appears elsewhere on the page as a parent, or spouse, the fact is indicated by p, g, or s.) w = witness

The fact that a page reference is not followed by one or more letters does not imply that there is no worthwhile information on that page concerning the person. Land transactions, migrations, service in wars, election or appointment to secular or ecclesiastical office, and a host of other types of information could not well be reduced to a letter or symbol.

Although items on more than two thousand pages of the Magazine have been checked against this index without finding errors or omissions, I plead guilty to having omitted that one vital reference that would have made this list indispensable to the reader of this preface.

Kenn Stryker-Rodda, F.A.S.G.

GIVEN NAME VARIANTS

In the index, &c after a given name indicates that at least three variants occur. All such variants are given in the following list.

The endings -ie, -je, and -ye are interchangeable. If all three occur, the -ie form is listed below, with an asterisk; if any two appear, both are given.

The liquids, r and l, are interchangeable, except initially. The letters u and v, i and j, are interchangeable, even initially.

Cross-references are normally omitted below unless the variants have different initial letters.
